Jack Hanley Gallery is pleased to present an exhibition of work by five New York-based painters; Tisch Abelow, Ariel Dill, Matthew Fischer, Heather Guertin and Heidi Hahn. This show exhibits a diversity of approaches to painting by young, emerging artists.

Hahn's soupy images recall memories from a dream, captured moments that would otherwise materialize into something tangible and then slip away. Fischer's have a similar unfolding narrative quality with no arch or discernible conclusion.

Dill's brushstrokes evoke automatic drawing, her brushstrokes organizing organic matter from a nuanced stroke. If Fischer and Hahn abstract the 'real' world Dill gives life to abstract forms. Gurtin's heavy surfaces are interrupted by one urgent stroke emerging from the underbrush.

Abelow's anthropomorphized cast of saxophones and palettes holds audible enthusiasm with no tonal gradation, just notes pitted against notes.
